WILSON VISITS RANDOLPH-MACON

New Jersey Governor Enthusiastically Received by College Students.

Students.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Ashland, Va., February 2.—Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, spoke to an enthusiastic audience this morning at 9:39 o'clock in the chapel of Itandolph-blacon College, at Ashland. When it was learned that Governor Wilson was to visit Richmond, the Randolph-Macon Club of the Woodrow Wilson League of College Men of America made plans to have him speak to the students here.

Governor Wilson delivered a twenty-minute address on the "Potentalities of Our American Colleges." He was often interrupted by outbursts of applause, mixed with college yells that ended with the chorus: "Wilson! President! Wilson!"

President Hackwell, of Randolph-Macon College, presided over the meeting, introducing Governor Wilson as "our max! President! After Governor Wilson as "our max! President! After Governor Wilson as "our max! President! After Governor Wilson's address, Dr. Blackwell referred to his having been at Wilson's Inauguration, at Princeton, where he shock hands with another college president in agreement that they would both be at Wilson's other inauguration in Washington.

Dr. Blackwell was followed by Dr. Hatcher, vice-president of the college, the property of the student of the fact that Itoosevelt had worn one of these stones all through his campaign for the presidency, and staggested that Taft would give a million dollars for one of them now.

The Governor and his party were met at the train by the entire student body and by all the people of Ashland.

"MAN PROPOSES"

The Story of an Ex-Millionaire Who Wanted to Die.

By Rex Beach

A tale of to-day, thrilling, gripping, fascinating, it runs the entire gamut of human emotions and leads you step by step to an unexpected conclusion, in the author's inimitable and forceful style.

"Lost Kingdoms" and "The Withered Hand"

The story of an actress's sacrifice, her humility and her triumph, "LOST KINGDOMS," by W. Carey Wonderly, appeals to the human interests as few stories have done. Be sure to read it next Sunday.

"THE WITHERED HAND" is a story of mystery by Douglass Bronston. To tell you more about it would spoil a rare treat. It is one of the best stories among a collection of good stories in the all-fiction number of the magazine in next Sunday's Times-Dispatch.
